As a trained fine artist, graduating with a BFA from College for Creative Studies, Julie has a passion for exploration, an insatiable curiosity to learn and a desire to push boundaries. She draws from an intersection of natural beauty and bold expression.

Her bodies of work include alcohol inks, watercolor, acrylic mono-prints and collage. Her contemporary art explores both abstract and representational themes in the natural landscape.

“I believe we all are creative and through art we can learn how to overcome the fear of comparison, the unknown, and those ugly expectations we impose on ourselves. The experience is often so therapeutic. Much of our time is spend regretting the past or worrying about the future but when you are actively engaged in the creative process you are very present, mindful, in the moment, and therefore alive!”
